RACCONTO (22 pagine) - FANTASCIENZA - Una sintetica è scomparsa e Ketama ha avuto l'incarico di ritrovarla. Ma prima deve scoprire perché quella macchina era così speciale per il suo proprietario.

Per Ketama, investigatore privato, quel lavoro era davvero una rognna. Pagato poco e poco interessante: ritrovare una sintetica, un androide di fattezze femminili sparito. Probabilmente guasto, o impazzito. Eppure la cosa aveva risvolti insoliti: perché il proprietario ci teneva così tanto? Perché non farselo semplicemente sostituire con un altro modello? Forse le cose erano più complesse di quanto non fossero a prima vista. Racconto vincitore del premio Courmayeur nel 1996, pubblicato in Francia in un'antologia del meglio della fantascienza.

Silvio Sosio, giornalista, è direttore della rivista "Robot" e del magazine online "Fantascienza.com". Ha pubblicato poco più di una decina di racconti soprattutto tra gli anni Ottanta e Novanta, uno dei quali è stato anche tradotto in Francia e incluso in un'antologia del meglio della fantascienza. Il suo ultimo racconto è uscito su "Urania" nel 2009, nella stessa settimana in cui è nato suo figlio. In seguito ha preferito dedicarsi alla selezione e valutazione dei racconti altrui. Vive a Milano e si divide tra l'attività editoriale e lo sviluppo di siti web.
